First Aid Trainer Validation

To become a First Aid Trainer at Scouts, volunteers must hold a first aid qualification provided by a regulated body, certifying their attendance to a 16 hours first aid course, and have their role recorded on Compass, and:

- Deliver a first aid training session supported by an experienced facilitator whilst being observed by an experienced presenter

Validation Criteria

Module 28 - Facilitating:

If they are a First Aid Trainer, they need to:

- Deliver a first aid training session supported by an experienced facilitator or whilst being observed by an experienced presenter
- Discuss how the presentation went and reflect on any improvements or adaptations that might be made in the future with particular reference to:
 - Whether the objectives of the presentation were met
 - The learning methods used
 - Resources and tools used to enhance the experience
 - Collection and use of feedback
- Once the experienced facilitator is happy that you've met the criteria, they should pass this information to the Training Adviser who will update your Compass record.

Module 29 - Presenting:

If they are a First Aid Trainer, they need to:

- Deliver a first aid training session supported by an experienced presenter or whilst being observed by an experienced facilitator
- Discuss how the session went and reflecting on any improvements or adaptations that might be made in the future with particular reference to:
 - Relating to others in a learning session
 - Communicating effectively in a learning session
 - Working with individuals and in small groups
 - Helping individuals to solve their own problems
- Once the experienced presenter is happy that you've met the criteria, they should pass this information to the Training Adviser who will update your Compass record.
